Message on a Kite

"I can't believe this is the last day of our vacation on Rainspell Island!" said Rachel Walker. She gazed up at her kite as it flew through the clear blue sky.

Kirsty Tate watched the purple kite soar above the field next to Mermaid Cottage. "But we still have to find Heather the Violet Fairy!" she reminded Rachel.

Jack Frost had cast a wicked spell that banished the seven Rainbow Fairies to Rainspell Island. And without the Rainbow Fairies, Fairyland had lost all its color! The girls had already found Ruby, Amber, Sunny, Fern, Sky and Inky. Now they only had Heather the Violet Fairy left to find.

Rachel felt a tug on the kite's string. She looked up. Something violet and silver flashed at the end of the kite's long tail. "Look up there!" she shouted.

Kirsty shaded her eyes with her hand. "What is it? Do you think it's a fairy?" she asked.

"I'm not sure," Rachel said, pulling in the string.

As the kite came floating toward them, Kirsty saw that a long piece of violet-colored ribbon was tied to its tail. She helped Rachel untie the ribbon and smooth it out on the ground.

"It has tiny silver writing on it," Rachel said.

Kirsty crouched down to have a closer look. "It says, follow me."

Suddenly the ribbon was swept up by the breeze. It fluttered across the field.

"It must be leading us to Heather!" Kirsty said.
